Off-duty cop beats gay teen, brother: lawsuit

By Megan Crepeau | REDEYE

An off-duty Chicago police officer working security at a South Side school targeted a lesbian student because she was wearing "boy" clothes, then beat her and kicked out her brother's teeth when he came to her aid, according to a federal lawsuit.

The violent clash happened Dec. 18, 2013, when Aaliyah Russell-Morgan, then 17, was in the hallway of Community Youth Development Institute, an alternative school she and her brother, Brandon Russell, attended, according to the lawsuit filed late January against the school and the city.

Xavier Chism, a Chicago police officer who worked as a security guard there, allegedly was upset that she was slow to go to class and told her, "If you're going to act like a boy, I'm going to treat you like a boy," according to the suit.

Russell

Then, the suit states, Chism dragged Russell-Morgan outside and wrestled her to the ground, cutting off her air, then got into a fistfight with her brother when he came to help.

"Apparently during the fistfight, Brandon made contact with the officer ... and somebody called the cops who were on duty, and they ... grabbed the student, they handcuffed him and put him on the ground. When he was on the ground, the cop whose face was hurt, he came up and kicked Brandon and knocked his teeth out," said the siblings' lawyer, Scott Kamin. "He was just pouring blood."

But Chicago police offer a different story.

An arrest report filed after the siblings were taken into custody states that it was Russell-Morgan and her brother who attacked Chism.

Before the confrontation, the off-duty officer had asked Russell-Morgan to stop holding a door open, at which point she told Chism, "I'll kill you and I don't care if you're the police, I'll kick your ass," the police report states. At one point she began hitting Chism, according to police.

Then Russell-Morgan's brother allegedly came up and punched Chism, leaving the officer with cuts to the face and a fractured nose, according to the police report.

The Independent Police Review Authority cleared Chism of wrongdoing in an investigation that closed in July, according to IPRA spokesman Larry Merritt.

A spokesman for the police union declined to comment, as did a representative of the school. Attempts to reach Chism were unsuccessful.

The Chicago Police Department confirmed that Chism still is a Chicago police officer, but did not comment further.

Russell-Morgan and Russell were charged with aggravated battery to a peace officer, but pleaded guilty to reduced misdemeanor charges of resisting arrest, Kamin said.

The excessive force and discrimination lawsuit does not mention the monetary value of the damages Kamin is seeking.

"My big concern is punishing the police and school," he said.

NEW FACE OF ACTIVISM

FIRED-UP MILLENNIALS BECOME POLITICAL, LABOR AND COMMUNITY ORGANIZERS

Chicago Tribune

On a snowy evening, Brianna Tong gathered more than 50 students in a classroom at the University of Chicago to meet and dine with aldermanic candidates. The smell of curry filled the air as Tong told the audience that before becoming a campaign volunteer, she didn't connect with public officials.

"(They) did not look like me ... did not represent people who looked like me," said Tong, 20, whose father is Asian and mother is African-American.

Now, she's spreading the word about candidates who share her views. Jobs, she said, should pay wages that at least keep up with the cost of living, and tax breaks should not be given to corporations that pay low wages.

"Does that sound exciting to y'all?" Tong asked at the end of a six-minute speech.

"Yeah," students exclaimed, cheering.

The faces of political, labor and community organizing campaigns in Chicago are getting younger. The groups are gaining the support of more millennials, now about ages 15-35, who are increasingly frustrated with everything from police profiling to the Illinois budget deficit to the lack of well-paying jobs, especially in fields that match their college educations.

Last year, the average student loan debt of a college graduate rose 6 percent, to $33,000. And while the unemployment rate for college graduates is the lowest since the recession, many are squeaking by in jobs that historically have been filled by high school students. In December, there were more than 1.4 million unemployed people in the U.S. older than 25 with a bachelor's degree.

"Everyone tells you, work hard, go to college, do well, and get a job and your life will be great, and that's clearly not how it is for a lot of people," said Tong, a college senior set to graduate this year with a bachelor's degree in English and comparative race and ethnic studies.

Tong's organizing work has been unpaid, but she's looking for entry-level positions with nonprofits and community groups, which pay about $30,000 a year. She committed herself to organizing when she realized its similarity to the civil rights movement.

> "I BELIEVE THAT WE CAN LIVE IN A COUNTRY THAT VALUES PEOPLE THAT DON'T HAVE MONEY. I BELIEVE THAT WE COULD LIVE IN A COUNTRY THAT TAKES CARE OF OUR PEOPLE BETTER."
> Melissa Rubio, an organizer for Reclaim Chicago

"That's something I heard about growing up from my mom," said Tong, whose grandmother participated in the 1963 march in Washington at which Martin Luther King Jr. delivered his "I have a dream" speech.

Youth involvement in community organizing gained national attention during the 2008 presidential campaign of Barack Obama, himself a former community organizer in Chicago. Now, millennials are a force in efforts to increase minimum wage, transform immigration policy and improve economic conditions.

Ed Shurna, executive director for the Chicago Coalition for the Homeless, said millennials' engagement is reminiscent of the rallies and protests of the 1960s. "It's really exciting when I go to meetings and meet people who are doing this who have the same spirit that attracted me (to organizing)," said Shurna, 69. "It's exciting, because it didn't happen for like 20 years."

As recently as six years ago, David Hatch, director of The People's Lobby, a political advocacy group, recalls looking around a room filled with organizers and realizing that, while in his 50s, he was the youngest person in attendance.

"Here is where I think bad (economic) conditions helped," said Hatch, noting his group now has vibrant campus organizations. Whether more Millennials will vote in the upcoming Feb. 24th city election remains to be seen. As RedEye has reported, voters ages 18-34 accounted for just 18.45 percent or around 110,000 votes of the nearly 600,000 ballots cast citywide in the Chicago's last mayoral election.

Those who have become organizers say the work gives them a sense of purpose.

Wayne Hayer, 22, who says organizing saved him from a life of drugs and crime, was 19 when he met an organizer who offered him a job working with at-risk youths in a summer program. He said he took the job only because it offered a little money, but then organizers began mentoring him and sent him to the Midwest Academy, a Chicago-based organizing school.

The experience helped him gain confidence, and he later became an organizer for a community group. He quit because he grew tired of knocking on doors, but after another job and some time off, Hayer said, he realized how much he missed organizing.

Now, he's in school and wants to expand on the organizing skills that he learned.

"The goal is to save the world. (But) if you can save one life, it's a life well-lived," Hayer said.

Jennifer Ritter, executive director of One Northside, said other young organizers have come from movements such as Occupy Wall Street, which helped open their eyes to how the country's slow recovery from the recession has dampened job opportunities.

Most recently, Ritter said, young people have been fired up by the marches in Ferguson, Mo., after an unarmed black teenager was fatally shot by a white police officer.

Some organizers say the work has helped them develop a voice.

"Every single day I get to work toward my own values and vision for the world," said Melissa Rubio, 24. "I believe that we can live in a country that values people that don't have money. I believe that we could live in a country that takes care of our people better."

Despite a degree in peace, justice and conflict resolution that has left her with $60,000 in student debt, Rubio said the only job she could find upon graduation was waiting tables, work she did in high school.

As an organizer, she spends her week working for an Illinois lawmaker and a local political organization.

Rubio said one of her first assignments was soliciting neighborhood support for a bus route that was slated to be eliminated, depriving residents of their lifeline to jobs.

Rubio said she didn't think women could be powerful, but she is leading groups and organizing people twice her age to help get people out to vote for progressive candidates.

Jeff Halm, president of the Chicago Young Republicans, said he started knocking on doors and making phone calls after he grew tired of people cracking jokes about how Illinois couldn't pay its bills. He started attending a monthly happy hour sponsored by the group, which has 800 members ages 18 to 41.

During November's election, Halm, 27, was among volunteers calling potential voters to encourage them to back Bruce Rauner for governor. Halm said he was proud to see Rauner win in a state that's often written off as blue.

Halm added: "I wanted to feel like I was doing something instead of being an armchair activist."

RARE AIR

14 YEARS, FOUR SUPER BOWL TITLES— PATRIOTS DYNASTY IS NO JOKE

By Chris Sosa | REDEYE

Pretty soon, fans are going to start paying more attention to the Super Bowl commercials and entertainment than the actual game.

What? That already happened? Perhaps.

Everyone can be happy though. Here are the moments from the Seattle-New England showdown—and everything in between—that made viewers in Chicago say "What Bears season?!" Oh, and we used some of Sunday's biggest personalities to sort through it all. CJSOSA@REDEYECHICAGO.COM | @REDEYESPORTSCIII

RATING SCALE:
- Johnny Weir and Tara Lipinski: Simply dazzling.
- Richard Sherman: CAN'T WAIT TO TELL YOUR FRIENDS!
- Bill Belichick: Definitely be afraid of it.
- Marshawn Lynch: You'll get nothing from it, so just move on.

FIRST QUARTER

JULIAN EDELMAN TALKS SMACK: SHERMAN

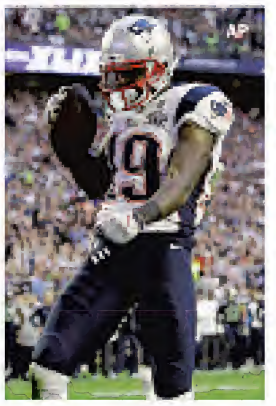
KIM KARDASHIAN DATA STASH COMMERCIAL: LYNCH
Please stop. This non-celebrity celebrity has been exposed enough. Shut it down already.

SECOND QUARTER

BRANDON LAFELL TD CATCH: SHERMAN
Judging by the flow of the Super Bowl at this moment, points could be tough to come by. Which greatly decreases the chances of awkward helmet bumps between Tom Brady and Rob Gronkowski.



AP

"FURIOUS 7" TRAILER: WEIR/LIPINSKI
Seven of these movies? It shouldn't work. But somehow you put Vin Diesel, Michelle Rodriguez and Co. on the screen with fancy cars and it works.

CHRIS MATTHEWS' 44-YARD CATCH: SHERMAN
So no crotch grab then? Saving that for the after-party, Chris? At least your wallet thanks you.

LYNCH'S TD RUN: BELICHICK
Hope you like Skittles. Because if Lynch (right) keeps playing like this, they're going to be on us like flying dinosaurs.

MATTHEWS' TD GRAB: WEIR/LIPINSKI
Let's get this straight. His first career reception is a 44-yarder in the Super Bowl, and his second is a touchdown to tie the game at the end of the first half? This guy's karma is off the charts.

THIRD QUARTER

DODGE CHALLENGER COMMERCIAL: WEIR/LIPINSKI
See, kids and pets aren't the only ones who can get through to people. Hats off to the centenarians.

CRIS COLLINSWORTH TRIES TO BE HIP: LYNCH

DOUG BALDWIN'S TD: LYNCH
Yeah, yeah, yeah, Baldwin's catch puts the Seahawks up 24-14, and then he gets a flag for excessive celebration. Just another case of the stuffy NFL acting like jerks, right, Marshawn?

NFL'S "TOGETHER WE MAKE FOOTBALL" COMMERCIAL: BELICHICK
So much yelling. Make it stop.

FOURTH QUARTER

COLLINSWORTH TRIES TO BE COOL AGAIN: LYNCH
"Here we go, hard ball with Chris Matthews," Collinsworth bellows, introducing a highlights package featuring the Seattle receiver. Please tell us you have something less obvious next time.

DANNY AMENDOLA'S TD GRAB: SHERMAN
Yep, this is when you said to yourself, "I'm glad I didn't give up this game yet. And that I took Monday off."

THAT FINISH: WEIR/LIPINSKI
Take a few minutes to catch your breath. Chances are you're hyperventilating, whenever you're reading this. Jermaine Kearse becomes the new Robert Tyree ... until rookie Malcolm Butler picks off Russell Wilson to seal the Patriots' 28-24 victory. Absolutely unbelievable. Millions of Americans experience recurrent outbreaks of the cold sore virus.

We are seeking healthy individuals age 18 and older with a history of recurring cold sore outbreaks. They may qualify for a clinical research study of an investigational topical cold sore medication if they have at least 3 cold sore outbreaks a year. Compensation of up to $625 is available for time and travel to those who qualify.

Now there's Noisegate?

The New England Patriots might not be alone when it comes to unfair advantages like Spygate (and perhaps Deflategate). According to ESPN, the NFL is investigating whether the Atlanta Falcons have pumped in artificial crowd noise the past two seasons at the Georgia Dome. Atlanta was 3-5 at home this season, including a loss to the Bears.

Hall comes calling

Former San Diego linebacker Junior Seau was among the six players elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame's class of 2015. Seau, who committed suicide in 2012, was elected in his first year of eligibility. The other players elected were Kansas City lineman Will Shields, Pittsburgh running back Jerome Bettis, Oakland receiver Tim Brown, San Francisco lineman Charles Haley and Minnesota lineman Mick Tingelhoff.

HOROSCOPES

TAROT.COM

Aquarius Jan. 20–Feb. 18
A discussion with a friend or partner might raise unexpected issues. Applying a dose of compassion helps you understand that you can have differing perspectives while still supporting one another's dreams.

Pisces Feb. 19 - March 20
Although it's not easy to comprehend all the forces that brought you to this moment, you're clear about what you want next. You can make your decision-making process easier if you're willing to wait for satisfaction.

Aries March 21 - April 19
Someone close to you may push your buttons. You probably won't be able to hide your annoyance. You can turn this situation around by transforming your anger into compassion.

Taurus April 20 - May 20
You might feel it's time to set the record straight. Setting aside logic enables you to ride the emotional waves that originate from your subconscious without trying to suppress them.

Gemini May 21 - June 20
Fixating on a particular goal is likely to bring unhappiness. You have a special opportunity now to push past an associate's judgment that's bothered you more than it should.

Cancer June 21 - July 22
Your resistance to change may grow into an obstacle to intimacy. Start tentatively and focus on what is in your heart. Your willingness to share your vulnerability can deepen your connection.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
A change in a relationship likely won't happen until you're willing to listen. Fortunately, a highly charged emotional interaction could morph into a more comfortable one later.

Virgo Aug. 23–Sept. 22
You desire a quick resolution to a disagreement and may try to force an issue. But don't push your luck. Allowing your feelings to surface naturally keeps you on the path to emotional equilibrium.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 22
You may feel weary from following all your friends' dramas, yet their stories have somehow become yours. Leaning on a trusted companion can help to move things off of dead center in the right direction.

Scorpio Oct. 23-Nov. 21
Although it's usually wise to share what you want with someone you love, it's unfair to make him or her responsible for your satisfaction. Practicing just a touch of emotional self-restraint can make all the difference.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
You may jump to conclusions, assuming you can get your needs met without considering how others might respond. There's no need to turn a minor setback into a national emergency. Prepare to work harder than ever.

Capricorn Dec. 22–Jan. 19
You might try to resist the pressure to re-examine your feelings. Your desire to cling to the status quo could cost you dearly if you let an opportunity pass you by.

TODAY IN THE YEAR ...

1653: New Amsterdam—now New York City—was incorporated.
1882: Irish poet and novelist James Joyce was born near Dublin.
1948: President Harry Truman sent to Congress a 10-point civil rights program calling for measures against lynching, poll taxes and job discrimination.
2014: The Seattle Seahawks thumped the Denver Broncos 43-8 in Super Bowl XLVIII in East Rutherford, N.J.

THE QUOTE

"Since my Bears are not in it, I think it's always wise for me not to choose a team because then I just alienate one big city"

—President Obama in a pre-Super Bowl segment with NBC's Savannah Guthrie on who he was rooting for in the big game. Guthrie and Obama filmed the interview while sipping White House-brewed beers, including a honey ale made from honey harvested from Michelle Obama's garden. Because obviously.

Beetlejuice! Beetlejuice! Beetlejuice!

Sure, Michael Keaton is all fancy now with his Best Actor buzz for "Birdman," but that doesn't mean he's forgotten his striped suited poltergeist roots. Keaton told People if a sequel is in fact being made to his 1988 classic "Beetlejuice," he'd be so down. Working with director Tim Burton again would be the biggest draw, the actor said: "[Burton is] unique, and that's not a word you can apply to many people," he told a panel at the Santa Barbara International Film Festival on Saturday. "And also original—certainly not a word you can apply to many people. He is both of those things and also an artist." But will there be another dinner party ruined by possessed shrimp? Co-star Winona Ryder has also reportedly said she'd be interested in making a second film, but really, what else does she have going on?

FIREWORKIN' IT

SURE, A GIANT, METALLIC LION PUPPET and silver horse-headed back-up dancers are to be expected, but DANCING SHARKS? ICYMI: Katy Perry and featured guests Lenny Kravitz and Missy Elliott lit up the Super Bowl halftime show Sunday, literally, with said anthropomorphic sidekicks, impressive pyrotechnics and the obligatory novelty bustier for Perry (she opted for beach balls instead of cupcakes this time). Other notable moments in the trippy production included Katy's flaming Cheetos dress in the opening number, Lenny Kravitz oddly heterosexualizing "I Kissed a Girl" and Missy Elliott killin' it, because, well, she's Missy Elliott. For more reaction to Perry's show, go to redeyechicago.com/katyreacts.

Timberbaby confirmed, nobody surprised

Former boy bander, actor, tequila purveyor, SNL hosting champ and all around cool guy Justin Timberlake officially is adding another superlative to his already long list: daddy. The musician confirmed via Instagram Saturday that he and wife Jessica Biel are expecting a baby, after months of speculation. "Thank you EVERYONE for the Bday wishes!," Timberlake captioned a picture of him kissing Biel's bumped-out belly. "This year, I'm getting the GREATEST GIFT EVER. CAN'T WAIT. #BoyOrGirl #YouNeverKnow #WeDontEvenKnow #WeAreTakingBets" Still looking for someone to cry you a river, JT? We've heard infants are good at that.

THE QUOTE

"I miss the thrill of getting away with it. Doing something that no one is capable of doing. People don't know how easily you could do it, if you have the expertise. But after the NFL put the sting on me and 9/11 and all the security—and I say this with all sincerity—I could not do today what I did back then."

—Prolific Super Bowl crasher Dion Rich in an article in Rolling Stone. Rich, now 85, crashed 35 Super Bowls, spent time with presidents and partied at the Playboy Mansion, among other feats.
